How the Jurors Stood.

How the Jurors Steed.

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:
Sir.—In my letter of the 15th instant to your paper from here, and published in your issue of the 18th, I notice that you have a list of jurors favoring conviction in the E. W. Overbey case, which had been on trial in the courts of this county for the past ten days, and which resulted in a hung jury, seven of which favored acquittal and the remaining five punishment in the slightest degree, as required by law. The list of jurors who were in favor of acquitting Mr. Overbey should have been J. A. Copley, C. G. Johnston, J. E. Smith, E. E. Taylor, G. T. Wright, R. B. Bobbitt, L. J. Newman, while those who favored punishment were R. F. Northington, B. B. Smith, A. J. Lambert, B. E. Pulley and C. G. Crow, instead of the reverse, as published in issue of 18th. I. agresume this must have been a typographical error. Please give this correction a prominent place in your next issue. Yours very truly,
